Recyclable Oxen in the Lobby

In Greek mythology it was known by all that any harm to any single animal belonging to the Gods was sure to bring down their wrath. It was this law that the crew of Odysseus broke by sacrificing and feasting on the herd of oxen, belonging to Helios, the Titan of the Sun, and lost their ship and lives in a lightning storm sent by Zeus.

The Oxen, found in our Lobby is a unique work created from discarded recyclable materials, collected along the Greek shores by renowned artist Spyros Kontoulis, on display courtesy of Loudos Galleries. Guests will have the chance to discover a signature experience of contemporary art by viewing the works of several renowned Greek and International artists at the Domes of Corfu.
